Although Maria had been studying English for several years, she still felt nervous about speaking in public. Her teacher, who had noticed her progress, encouraged her to participate in the school debate competition.

At first, Maria refused — she was afraid of making mistakes in front of an audience. However, after weeks of practice and her family's support, she finally agreed.

To everyone's surprise, including her own, she won second place. She realized that the only way to overcome fear was to face it directly.
